

The personas are defined over the same feature space the preference head is fitted on, which turns the central question into a measurable one: not “did acceptance rise” — any degenerate system achieves that — but “did the machinery recover the taste it was shown”. What this cannot measure is real taste, fatigue, or trust. A persona is a linear functional plus noise; only a human study would settle those.